Reason for study (what were the problems)?	The Polish Act on the protection of the rights of purchasers of flats or single-family houses entered into force in 2012. Its main objective was to reduce the risk borne by consumers when purchasing a house or a flat on the primary market. After two years of the act's existence, UOKiK conducted a market study the main purpose of which was to assess the impact of the new regulation on the market. Nearly 1,000 entities - developers, housing co-operatives and banks - were asked to provide their assessment of the regulations in force, the impact thereof on their business activity, as well as their opinion on the need for and the scope of potential modifications to the Act. Information gathered during the market study was used to prepare the "Draft information of the Council of Ministers for Parliament concerning implications of the Act's implementation, with proposed amendments".

Outcome (tick relevant columns):
Reason for study (what were the problems)?	On 1 January 2012, an amendment prepared by the Ministry of Environment entered into force changing the Act on maintaining cleanliness and order in communes. It completely changed the system of waste management in Poland. Before the amendment, property owners could decide which undertaking was to collect their waste. Under current rules, this choice can only be made by the commune/municipality by way of a tender procedure. The selected company provides its services throughout the territory of a given commune/municipality, and in the case of larger municipalities - within a certain area. Local authorities needed to introduce new solutions until mid-2013. While the works on the new regulations were in progress, the Office of Competition and Consumer Protection decided to examine the situation on this market
